The Charleston News.

MONDAY, MAY 29, 1871.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Gold closed in New York, on Saturday, at 141 1/2.

—Cotton closed firmer and one-eighth higher; uplands 17 cents; sales 2144 bales.

—In Liverpool cotton closed firmer; uplands 7 1/2 d.; Orleans 7 1/2 d.; sales 12,000 bales.

—Hendricks, Hancock and Hoffman are spoken of as candidates of the Democracy on Vallandigham's platform of "the new departure."

—The great vineyards of Chateau Lafitte, whence come some of the finest brands of claret, are offered for sale by their owners, the French Rothschilds, by whom they were purchased in 1867.

—New York papers report vegetables arriving in New York from the South in great numbers, especially by the Charleston line, 400 tons of which were received by steamer, New potatoes are now received in large quantities from South Carolina and Georgia.

—A correspondent from Paris describes the barricades around the Place Vendôme and at the Champs Elysees entrance to the Rue de Rivoli, as very excellent works of art, but of very poor material to resist a cannonade. They are composed of little sand bags, made of white linen and bed ticking, and stuffed with gravel. While the fortifications, embrasures, platforms, and ditches are very scientifically fashioned, so they are all parts of the work that the barricades look as if they were intended for exhibition.

—In two months' time the election for President of Mexico comes off. The parties, of which Lerdo de Tejada, at present Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and General Porfirio Diaz, the well-known general, are the candidates, are almost revolutionary in the intensity of their opposition to the re-election of President Juarez. It is almost universally admitted in Mexico that a war must follow the election, no matter who is elected. President Juarez is, in consequence, openly counselled by some of his friends to declare the election for President "off," and to proclaim himself President for the next term, without the absurd formality of a popular election.

—The Count de Chambord, one of the aspirants to the throne of France, has written a letter on the political situation in that country, which is in fact a declaration of the principles on which he proposes to govern should he be elected King. He urges Frenchmen to forget their dissensions and to unite as a nation of brothers. As for himself, he denounces as a calumny the statement that he had renounced his claims to the throne. "The abandonment of true principles," he says, "is the cause of France's disasters. The good sense of the country desires a monarchy. He does not want unlimited power, and he desires that his acts as King should be submitted to the decision of representatives elected by the people. The traditional monarchy, he affirms, is entirely compatible with the equality of all before the law. If King, he would demand guarantees for the independence of the Pope. Upon this subject, he says: "The liberty of the church is the first condition of peace in the public mind, and order throughout the world." He wants no particular party to support his acts, but would desire the co-operation of all Frenchmen in his reign. Here is a Bourbon who, seems ambitious to forget and to learn something in the art of governing.

—The London papers of the 13th print copious comments on the treaty, a sketch of which reached them on the previous day. The Times remarks that it "is the result of mutual concession; nor is it to be disguised that it embodies a preponderance of concession on the side of Great Britain. Perhaps this was inevitable. We have always held that if a few honest Englishmen and Americans could be got together in a room and trusted with the negotiation, the difficulties of diplomacy would vanish and a compromise might be effected satisfactory to both nations." The News thinks "it will be the basis of a lasting friendship, proving to the Old World how the differences of great nations can be settled without bloodshed." The Telegraph calls it "a work of good will, and a new starting-point for the growth of better feelings between nations that ought never to have been alienated by petty jealousies and bitter words." The Post thinks a "more extraordinary perversion of all known methods of proceeding than that contained in the treaty it is difficult to conceive." It hopes that the United States may—though it cannot be expected that England will be thoroughly satisfied. The Saturday Review calls it an absolute surrender of every point for which successive English Governments have contended. The Spectator thinks the frank expression of regret the only course likely to heal the wound completely, by sacrificing all unworthy pride and reserve. On all the other points the solution arrived at by the commission seems quite unexceptionable.

—Many unsuccessful searches have been made for the treasures supposed to have been buried by the pirate Lafitte on some of the islands in the Gulf of Mexico, some eighty miles from New Orleans. One of the pirate's men when dying gave a family named Newell, who had befriended him, a diagram and written description of the exact spot where the treasure was buried. Mr. Newell made three attempts to reach the place; but on the first voyage was shipwrecked; on the second his partner was sunstruck, and on the third voyage Mr. Newell himself was taken suddenly ill, and also died. But Mr. Newell had a son, then a young man, and a printer working in the office of the New Orleans Picayune, who resolved to try to accomplish what his father could not. Therefore, some three years ago, young Newell fitted out a small vessel and made the voyage to within sight of the island, when a violent storm came on and his vessel was wrecked. One year after this he made another attempt to reach the island, but was again wrecked. A month ago he fitted out another vessel, and made a third trial to obtain the golden treasure. A week ago his little body was picked up near the Rigolets, floating in the muddy waters of Lake Pontchartrain, perforated by two bullet-holes. There seems to be a singular fatality accompanying the spot where Lafitte buried his spoils. Every person who has yet attempted to approach that island with the object of unearthing his treasures has met a sudden death.

—The ship which left of Regulus last Tuesday morning, at 8 o'clock, set sail from New York for Liverpool, after having been in readiness and awaiting a favorable breeze for several days past. She went to sea with a crew consisting of Nicholas Primrose, an Englishman, aged thirty-four years, who was the builder of this little craft, and is now the captain on her homeward voyage; E. W. Heyster, deck-hand, aged twenty, and a native of New Zealand, and "boatswain," a dog, aged—, that is to fill the important position which its name indicates. The City of Regulus is the smallest sea-going ship in existence, being of only one and a half tons burden, (though with a carrying capacity of two tons), and is seven feet shorter on keel, and of three tons less tonnage, than the famous American miniature ship, the Red, White and Blue. She carries a cargo of bricks as ballast, and has on board besides one hundred gallons of water and provisions to last the crew (the dog included) for three months. In the fore-part has been placed a small cooking stove, and the steering apparatus is arranged in such manner that one man can cook and steer at the same time, while the other takes a nap in the cabin below. This latter convenience is, in the hold of the little ship, and is barely big enough for a man to sit up in; it is, however, a perfect model of neatness and ingenuity in its fittings and interior arrangements. Captain Primrose was the companion of Captain Buckley, who was the original commander, and who took her across from England, and he must therefore have some experience of the tour. For all that, it is a reckless and foolish undertaking, endangering the lives of two men, and for no earthly good, and to no purpose whatever.

Peace or War?

Let the Radical organ be more explicit. We do not care to discuss the force or the good taste of proverbs. But we should like to know exactly where our incomprehensible contemporary stands. While reiterating its excellent sentiments about the city election, it reminds us that it does not "own" the "Republican party." It would have been more to the purpose had it informed us, whether it is itself owned by the Republican party. In other words, whether it means, after all the good advice it has given to everybody in the line of keeping politics out of our municipal affairs, to follow whither-soever Mr. Thomas Jefferson Mackey, Mr. George Washington Clark, and the rest of the professional office-hunters may choose to lead the poor black dupes, whom they know so well how to manipulate. If such be the intention of our contemporary, we shall know exactly how much its words of compromise and moderation are worth. But if, on the other hand, it means to support, regardless of politics, the men among those nominated whom it may honestly believe to be the best fitted to manage the business interests of Charleston, we shall be heartily glad to hear and to announce the fact.

But let there be an end to such childish talk as waiting "till within two weeks of the election," when the black cohorts are nightly being drilled into a compact political mass. Organization must be met by organization.

The New Democratic Platform.

It may do very well for the moribund sheets, which call themselves the organs of "The Republican Party in the South," to pooh-pooh every sensible move of the National Democracy. It is their appointed duty to whistle incessantly in order to keep up the courage of their deluded supporters, and their very existence, in great measure, depends upon the zeal they may evince in persuading the black rabble whom they address that victory is chained to the Radical standards. But the case is widely different with the able and really influential Republican journals of the North. These, which have a reputation to lose as shrewd and fair chroniclers of current political events, are just now singing a very different tune. They make no secret of their alarm at the sudden change in the tactics of their opponents. The New York Tribune plainly expresses the belief that "the next Presidential campaign" will be the hottest within the memory of "this generation." And The Nation, in alluding to the new Vallandigham platform, says:

"It should secure acceptance at the hands of the party at large, it will be entitled to the rank of a political event of the first importance. If, too, the Democrats should put on it, at the next Presidential election, a candidate of high standing and character, of good Union antecedents during the war, the consequences would most likely be such as Messrs. Cameron, Forney and the like would at first contemplate with horror, and then adapt themselves to with commendable alacrity."

These are fair samples of the present tone of most of the leading Radical journals which have come to hand. It is not that they fear Vallandigham, or even the whole body of the Ohio Democracy who may range themselves under the banner which he has set up. It is because the signs are too plain to be mistaken that the progressive ideas of the Dayton resolutions will be adopted with unanimity and enthusiasm by the Democracy of the whole Union, and that the Presidential election of 1872 will be fought upon them. Already, has the great Keystone State thundered forth her echo. At the State convention of the Democrats of Pennsylvania, held at Harrisburg on Wednesday last, to nominate candidates for the election which takes place on Tuesday, October 10, the platform adopted was in all essential particulars the same as that promulgated by Mr. Vallandigham. When the Democracy of Ohio and Pennsylvania thus speak in unison, declaring principles that must satisfy not only every Democrat, but every fair-minded Republican who is disgusted with the excesses or the shortcomings of his own party, it is indeed time for the Radical journal to tremble.

Railroad Consolidation in Georgia.

The Georgia Central Railroad has made another stride in advance, having just leased the Macon and Western Railroad—from Macon to Atlanta—for the period covered by its charter. Virtually, this is an amalgamation of the two corporations, and now gives the Central company an unbroken road from Savannah to Atlanta. This transfer, we understand, inclines the interest of the Macon and Western Road in the projected line northward, branching off at Griffin and extending to Decatur, Alabama, now completed as far as Newnan, where it intersects the Atlanta and West Point Railroad. It is thought the Central company will use its means and influence to bring about the completion of this enterprise. We should be glad to see this road built, as it would greatly shorten our route to the West, and almost give us an air line to Memphis. We do not for a moment suppose that the fact of this new road being desired by Charleston would be an additional incentive to our Savannah friends to exert themselves to build it. But we say, let the road be built, and we are willing to take our chances afterward for a connection with it.

A Model Legislator.

A correspondent, "M," in a long communication to the Charleston Democrat, charges R. James Donaldson with being the instigator, if not the actual perpetrator, of all the so-called Ku-Klux outrages in the county, including the murder of Melton. He sets forth the reasons for his belief at length. Donaldson, it will be recollected, is one of the very worst of the carpet-baggers that were stranded on this shore by the receding tide of war, and has been a thorn in the flesh to the people of the Pee Dee country from 65 to this day. Like Whittemore, Donaldson is a Northern Methodist preacher. He has been engaged in politics, gold mines, the land commission, and general merchandise. He is now, or lately has been, internal revenue collector, and in all these several widely varied employments has somehow managed to get the ill-will of all honest men with whom he came in contact. One of the most prominent Republican officials is our authority for his general character.

The New York Sun nominates, as "the People's Candidates" for President and Vice-President in 1872, Wm. S. Groesbeck, of Ohio, and John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts. It also nominates as the "Office-holders' Candidate," Useless S. Grant.

"Schnapps" is a remedy in chronic catarrhal complaints, &c.

I take great pleasure in bearing highly creditable testimony to its efficacy as a remedial agent in the diseases for which you recommend it. Having a natural tendency to the mucous surfaces, with a slight degree of stimulation, I regard it as one of the most important remedies in chronic catarrhal affections, particularly those of the genito-urinary apparatus. With much respect, your obedient servant,

CHAS. A. LEAS, M. D., New York.

No. 26 PINE STREET, N. Y., Nov. 21, 1867.

UDOLPHO WOLFE, Esq., Present: DEAR SIR—I have made a chemical examination of a sample of your "Schiedam Schnapps," with the intent of determining if any foreign or injurious substance had been added to the sample distilled spirits.

The examination has resulted in the conclusion that the sample contained no poisonous or harmful admixtures. I have been unable to discover any trace of the deleterious substances which are sometimes employed in the adulteration of liquors. I would not hesitate to use myself, nor to recommend to others, for medicinal purposes, the "Schiedam Schnapps" as an excellent and unobjectionable variety of gin. Very respectfully yours, (Signed) CHAS. A. SEELY, Chemist.
